History

Prior to European contact, southwest Florida was occupied by Native Americans of what are now called the Safety Harbor and Caloosahatchee cultures. When the Spanish first arrived in the vicinity of Charlotte Harbor, the dominant people in the region were the Calusa, and it was they who encountered Juan Ponce de Leon, first in 1513 during his first exploration of the Florida peninsula and again in 1521 when he unsuccessfully attempted to establish a Spanish colony in the region. By the early 18th century, ravaged by disease and war, surviving Calusa joined the Native American group now known as the Seminole. From then until the end of the Civil War, settlement in what is now Charlotte County was confined to Cuban ranchos, small military and/or trading posts and cattle docks.

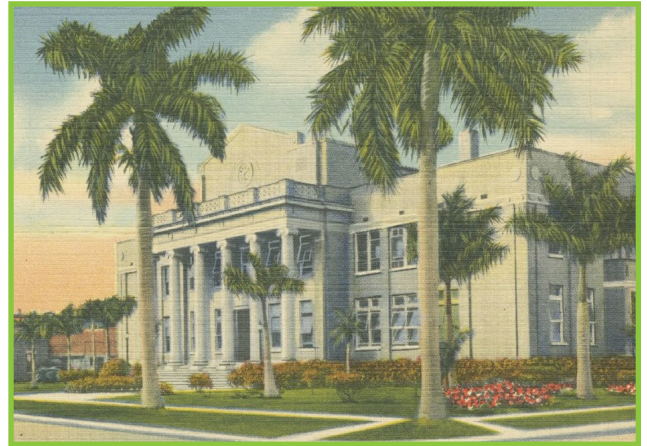

As American settlers moved further west and south after the American Revolution, and Florida became a U.S. territory in 1821, Maskoki-speaking Native Americans from Georgia, Florida, Alabama and other parts of the southeast who had survived disease and warfare gradually moved further south into the Florida peninsula. These cimarrones (runaways), or "Seminoles," as they became known in English, fought a series of wars against the U.S. Army from 1817–1858 that disrupted Native and Euro-American life throughout South Florida and the Peace River valley. They were never defeated and never surrendered, staying in South Florida despite the relocation of many of their people to Oklahoma, and were formally recognized by the federal government in 1957.

After 1865, permanent settlements began to flourish in what is now Charlotte County—Charlotte Harbor, Hickory Bluff, Punta Gorda, Cleveland—and continued to expand with the introduction of the railroad and prosperous industries like turpentine, timber, fishing and phosphate in the late nineteenth and early twentieth century. This made the region a destination for both permanent and temporary "snowbirds," and contributed to the decision to build the first bridge over Charlotte Harbor. Begun in 1916 thanks to the issuance of $200,000 in bonds by the town of Charlotte Harbor and Punta Gorda, the project suffered setbacks during World War I but was finally completed and opened on July 4, 1921, just a few months after the creation of Charlotte County.

Welcome & History

Decades of debate over the division of DeSoto County, Charlotte County's "parent" county since 1887, culminated in the successful election of pro-division officials to the state legislature in 1920. When the new session opened in the spring of 1921, that body passed, and newly-elected governor Cary A. Hardee signed, the legislation that established four new counties: Charlotte, Glades, Hardee and Highlands. The name "Charlotte" was selected by a public vote per the suggestion of state senator F.M. Cooper of Punta Gorda, with the result announced on March 17, 1921 in the Punta Gorda Herald. Charlotte County officially came into being on April 23, 1921, with Punta Gorda designated the county seat. Initially, government business was conducted in an office building on Marion Street. On April 15, 1927, the Herald announced that the county had purchased land on the corner of Taylor Street and Olympia Avenue belonging to George Brown for $25,000. The following year, on March 20, the new Charlotte County courthouse was formally opened with great fanfare.

A contest to design the county seal was held in 1969. Kathy Nichols, an art student at Charlotte High School, won the contest and was awarded $25. Her design illustrates the location of Charlotte County on a map of Florida, highlighting the area's great tarpon fishing.

The two-story administration building in Murdock opened in 1981, becoming the new home of the Board of County Commissioners. In 1985, Charlotte County adopted a Home Rule Charter giving the Board of County Commissioners the authorization to pass laws.

A new logo was launched in 2018, a variation of the successful tourism logo launched in 2016, to unify branding for both visitors and residents. The county seal continues to be used for legal documents such as ordinances and proclamations.

Elected Officials

Charlotte County Government has several elected officials: the Board of County Commissioners, Clerk of the Circuit Court, Property Appraiser, Sheriff, Supervisor of Elections and Tax Collector. Each of these elected officials acts independently. In addition to the elected officials, the county also features a School Board and Airport Authority which act with independent authority.

Board of County Commissioners

Charlotte County adopted a Home Rule Charter in 1985, giving the Board of County Commissioners the authorization to pass laws. The county operates under an elected County Commission, composed of five Commissioners and an appointed County Administrator who is chosen by and responsible to the Board of County Commissioners. The County Administrator is the chief administrative officer of the county and is accountable for all administrative matters and operations under the authority of the commissioners.

The five Commissioners are elected for a four-year term by a county-wide vote. Commissioners from Districts 1, 3 and 5 are elected in presidential election years; Commissioners from Districts 2 and 4 are elected in alternating even years. The Board of County Commissioners meets on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month for regular Board meetings at the Murdock Administration Center in Port Charlotte.

Property Appraiser

18500 Murdock Circle, Port Charlotte, FL 33948
941.743.1593 ■ www.ccappraiser.com

The Property Appraiser is required to determine the just value of all real property and tangible personal property within Charlotte County annually as of January 1. Just value is legally synonymous to 100 percent of fair market value. However, due to additional requirements of Florida law, the annual just value determined for real property is typically lower than the amount for which a property may sell.

Tangible personal property consists primarily of furniture, fixtures and equipment used in a business and the contents of rental properties. Filing of an annual return is required by April 1.

The Property Appraiser also administers property tax exemptions and agricultural classifications. The most recognized exemption is the homestead exemption, which decreases a property's taxable value by $25,000 for qualifying homeowners, saving $400 to $500 in property taxes each year. An associated benefit is the annual "Save Our Homes" limitation on any increase in "assessed" value. The homestead exemption is available on property owned by legal residents of Florida who permanently reside thereon as of January 1. Qualified homeowners are required to apply for any exemption by March 1.

In addition to the Murdock office, you can contact the Property Appraiser at the following locations:

City of Punta Gorda

The City of Punta Gorda is about 16 square miles and boasts a small town atmosphere with all the pleasures of a larger city. The economy is booming and the cost of living is well below the national average.

Punta Gorda, which was incorporated on December 7, 1887, is the only incorporated city in Charlotte County and has an approximate population of 18,790. It was originally named “Trabue” in 1885 after developer, Colonel Isaac Trabue, who purchased the land from British investors.

Punta Gorda has traced its roots to a landing at Live Oak Point on the Peace River by Hernando DeSoto in 1539. Punta Gorda is Spanish for “Broad Point” and refers to its broad point of land jutting out into the harbor. Early Spanish attempts to colonize the outer islands in present-day Charlotte County were thwarted by Calusa Indian tribes and the area was slowly settled as the English migrated to Charlotte Harbor on the banks of the Peace River.

In 1884, surveyor Kelley B. Harvey worked to lay out streets and blocks according to instructions from Isaac Trabue, then a Kentucky resident. All waterfront property was designated to be parks and the streets were not to run in a north-south direction, but rather, to wind along the Peace River. The Town of Trabue, a subdivision, was recorded on February 24, 1885; however, by 1887 enough residents in Trabue objecting to Trabue’s efforts to control the town’s destiny were able to outvote him and revert the name to Punta Gorda during the incorporation process. These 34 men, including four black men and carpenters stranded here after building the old Hotel Punta Gorda, met at the Tom Hector Building in Hector’s Pool Hall located upstairs from the town’s drug store to draft the City’s incorporation papers.

The City Council then appoints its own Mayor and Vice Mayor from among the five Council members. City Council also appoints a City Attorney, City Clerk and City Manager. Punta Gorda practices a Council-Manager form of government, where the City Council is the legislative arm and the City Manager (as opposed to the Mayor) is the administrative arm of the government.
